

Built for Freedom with Codex

You do not need another AI tool. You need one messy thing to get lighter.

The Software Reflex

When everything feels loud, the instinct is to buy another tool. That usually gives you another login, another setup, and one more thing to maintain.

The turn is simple:

- stop chasing the whole stack
- pick the workflow stealing time
- make a rough first version
- clean it up after it exists

The Codex Move

- Name what is costing time.
- Give Codex the real context.
- Ask for the first usable draft.
- Inspect it before trusting it.
- Turn what worked into a repeatable skill.

Start simple. Do not upload sensitive client or account data until the guardrails are clear.

QUESTION TO ASK

Check My Sprint Fit

If Codex helped you for six weeks, what would you build first?
